

What does a Mentor do?

The foundation of the mentoring relationship is the love of Christ. Just as Jesus loved His disciples, mentors similarly learn to love their mentees in this discipleship relationship.

➔ On the basis of Jesus' love, the mentor has three roles:

Know – Develop a Personal Relationship with Mentees

To courageously and intentionally discover and enter a mentee's personal life.

Feed – Provide Spiritual Nourishment and Truth to Mentees

To encourage and advise not just on logic but on what the Bible teaches us.

Lead – Direct, Encourage, and Spur Mentees to Life Change

To follow-up on various life circumstances and areas of growth in mentees, holding them to account.

➔ Mentors journey with their mentees in these areas of their spiritual lives:

Upward – Devotional Life

To grow our relationship with God, to discover His Word and to worship Him.

Inward – Personal Life

To grow to make Biblical, Christ-centred decisions and breakthroughs.

Outward – Ministry Life

To grow to love others by reaching out and serving people around us.

What does a Mentee do?

A fruitful and meaningful mentoring relationship relies on mutual commitment between a mentor and a mentee. While mentors may guide mentees in the journey of growth, it is important to recognize that mentees must always take ownership of their spiritual lives.
